Well Service Blowout Prevention - Description

This four-day course is aimed at the service rig operators, service rig managers, well site supervisors, field foremen, production foremen and production engineers involved in well killing operations on the service rig.

Topics covered include sources and magnitude of pressures, causes of kicks, BOP equipment, kick warning signs, crew positions and duties, well shut-in procedures, well killing procedures, calculations and government regulations.

Upon successful completion of the Well Service Blowout Prevention examination, the candidate will be issued the required Well Service Blowout Prevention certificate, valid for five (5) years.

- Students taking the course for the first time or renewing an expired certificate will be required to attend the full four-day course, complete with the hands-on accumulator function test.
- Students renewing their valid Well Service Blowout Prevention certificate for the first time after five years may challenge the exam or take the Well Service Blowout Prevention correspondence course. If the student fails the exam, the student will be required to attend the full four-day course, complete with the hands-on accumulator function test. No second exam challenges will be allowed. Fees apply.
- If the exam following the course is failed the student is allowed one rewrite within a 30 day period. Rewrite fees apply.
- Well Service Blowout Prevention courses, exam challenges, and Self Study may be done up to 90 days prior to the expiry of the certificate. If the exam is successfully passed the new expiry date will be five years beyond the present certification expiry date.
